[This Robin Hood was a famous Robber, and ſtoried to be an expert Archer in the Time of Richard the Firſt, about the Year 1200; his principal Haunt was about Sherwood Foreſt in Nottinghamſhire.] This Proverb is applicable to all ignorant Pretenders and Braggadochio's whatſoever, either in Knowledge or Buſineſs. But they who pretend themſelves to be what they are not, will always be pratting of what they do not know, So, Non omnes qui Citharam tenent, Citharœdæ ſunt, ſay the Latins; Πολλοὶ μὲν ναρθηκόφοροι, παυροι δε τε βακχοι, the Greeks; and Molli par an di Orlando, chi non videro, mai ſuo brando, the Italians.

This Proverb is uſually applied to ſuch as having gotten any Thing diſhoneſtly, ſell it at a Price much below the Value, according to the Proverb, Lightly come, lightly go; and Robin Hood is alluded to, becauſe, being an expert Archer, and ſo coming eaſily by it, he could afford to ſell Veniſon as cheap as Neck-Beef; according to the Latins, Aurea pro Æreis, and the Greeks, χυσεα χαλκείαν. But others, on the contrary, apply it to ſuch as would buy lumping Pennyworths, ſtill alluding to Robin, but upon another Conſideration, viz. his being a Robber; who, though, as Cambden calls him, Prædonem mitiſſimum, the moſt gentle and generous of Thieves, when Caſh run low, would have what he wanted at his own Rate, which his Chapmen were forced to take, or elſe he would have it for nothing.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careleſs Groom, but has a more extended Aim; it intimates, that 'tis a mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumſtances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event, to our great Shame and Damage. This is generally the Wiſdom of the World, when the Thing is over, we are as wiſe as Experience can make us. Almoſt all the Miſcarriages of Mankind are for want of Thinking: After-Wit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Miſfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foreſight; an After-thought may inhance our Trouble, but can't relieve our Diſtreſs; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but cannot make any Satisfaction for what is paſt. Serrar la Stalla quando s'han perduti buovi, ſay the Italians. Il eſt temps de fermer l'eſtable quand les Chevaux en ſont allez, the French. Quando quidem accepto claudenda eſt janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better ſteal a Horſe, than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not juſtify ſtealing at all; it means very honeſtly, and is only a ſmart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgment as publick Trials. It intimates, that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws againſt Oppreſſion and Robbery in their own Hands, little Thieves only go to pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are puniſhed with Death at the Gallows, while great Offenders live ſafe and ſecure under the Helm of Government. This Proverb is for doing all People Juſtice alike, from the higheſt to the loweſt, and in all Caſes whatſoever, either of Deſert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age; Cozening is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler way of ſtealing now than only to take a Man's Horſe from under him on the Highway, and a little looſe Money out of his Pocket; our Rapparees are Men of better Breeding and Faſhion, and ſcorn to play at ſuch ſmall Game, they ſweep away a noble Eſtate with one ſlight Bruſh, and bid both the Gallows and Horſe-Pond Defiance; and the Mob is not always juſt in this Point, for one Pickpocket deſerves a Horſe-pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Cloaths. But, Dat veniam Corvis, vexat Cenſura Columbas, ſay the Latins.

He ſteals a Gooſe, and gives the Giblets in Alms.

This Proverb points at ſuch Perſons, who by Acts of Injuſtice, Oppreſſion, and Fraud, amaſs to themſelves large Eſtates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing ſome charitable Acts while they are alive; or when they can no longer poſſeſs them, by leaving their Lands in Mortmain to pious and charitable Uſes, as building and endowing Hoſpitals, Alms-houſes, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Chriſtian Charity) but they who think by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly diſparaging the Juſtice of the Almighty: Parallel to this is the Hebrew Adage, נפא בחוורין יטתקא לבישא

All the Actions and Enterpriſes of Mankind labour under the Reflection of this quaint moral Sentence, whether they be prudent or imprudent in the Undertaking, and good or bad in the Accompliſhment. It intimates, that Perſons ſhould be very deliberate and adviſed in the Beginning of an Undertaking; for that to begin well is the only Way to quicken and diſpatch the End, let it be what it will. It intimates, that there is a great deal of Difficulty in beginning well, and that a falſe Step at firſt Start is hardly to be recovered afterwards: That the Work does not coſt half ſo much Trouble as the Deſign of it; that it is an eaſy Matter to make way when the Ice is broke. It reflects upon falſe Foundations and fooliſh Projects, and it holds good from Morality and worldly Affairs to Religion, That a good Beginning is a fair Step to a good Ending. Dimidium facti, qui bene cœpit, habet, ſay the Latins; and Αρχὴ ἥμισυ παντός. Ariſt.

All is well that ends well.

It is plain Matter of Fact, that the End crowns all Things, and that every Thing is not to be judged amiſs that may appear ſo for the preſent. A worldly Misfortune, if it quickens our Diligence and Induſtry; a ſevere Fit of Sickneſs, if it promotes our Piety, and makes us amend our Lives, is well; though for the preſent no Affliction ſeems joyous, but grievous: For a happy Death is the never-failing Portion of a well ſpent Life, which always ends in eternal Bliſs and Glory. The beſt way of judging of Things beyond Miſtake, is by the Iſſue or Event of them. Finis coronat Opus, ſay the Latins: Ende wohl, alles wohl, ſay the Germans; and Αλκυονιδας ἡμερας ἄγει, the Greeks.
